SCIENTIFIC RATIONALE

Paediatric Intensive Care is a constantly evolving field, characterized both by the specific needs of the paediatric age group and by the complexity and variety of the clinical and organizational issues it encompasses. This multidimensionality demands a highly specialized, interdisciplinary, and continuously updated approach.

Our Congress aims to bring together national and international experts in the field of paediatric intensive care, with the goal of addressing key challenges, highlighting emerging priorities, and discussing the future outlook of intensive care for children. It will be an important opportunity for dialogue, scientific advancement, and professional development, fostering the exchange of experiences and the creation of a network among professionals working in this field.

This meeting is intended for the following healthcare professionals.

- Pediatric Intensivists and Anesthesiologists
- Critical Care Nurses
- Pediatric Residents
- Residents in Anesthesiology and Intensive Care
